Second Annual
2018 kalamazoo
FOODWAYS
symposium

The Second Annual Foodways Symposium will be a celebration of Kalamazoo's food history and an examination of food, justice and cultural traditions.

Larry Plamondon (Grand River Band of Ottawa) will tell traditional stories from the Anishinabe. He will be joined by FireKeepers Chef James Thomson (Sault Ste. Marie Tribe of Chippewa Indians), who will talk about traditional foodways and the need to return to healthy foods. Chef James will provide tastings at the Kalamazoo Valley Museum during Art Hop, from 5 to 7 p.m.

Participants from the Gun Lake Band of Potawatomi, FireKeepers Casino and Hotel restaurants (Nottawaseppi Huron Band of Potawatomi), and others will discuss Native American food history, culture, and what food sovereignty means today.

Cooking demonstrations, cooking classes for youth, workshops and food tastings will be available FREE on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Culinary and Allied Health Building.
