Black Refractions: Highlights from The Studio Museum in Harlem

Opening Saturday, September 14 along with two exhibitions curated by the KIA:
Resilience: African American Artists as Agents of Change* and *Where We Stand: Black Artists in Southwest Michigan

The Kalamazoo Institute of Arts is proud to host a suite of exhibitions that will fill nearly the entire museum with art by Black and African American artists from around the country and the world.

Black Refractions will make its only Midwest stop at the KIA, while the Studio Museum raises its new building. Curated from the KIA collection, Resilience spotlights important artists of the 20th and 21st centuries. Where We Stand features emerging artists alongside veterans in their field exploring subjects as diverse as the environment, the criminal justice system, the human body, and concepts of beauty. Arts organizations throughout Kalamazoo are also hosting events throughout the Fall, and together we are building a community-wide celebration that will honor the diversity of art and culture in Southwest Michigan.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 11 am-5 pm
FREE COMMUNITY OPENING DAY PARTY

Join us to explore a museum full with three new exhibitions. Families can enjoy art-making with artists Brent Harris, James C. Palmore, and Al Harris, Jr.; Art Detectives storytelling in the library; refreshments; and performances by artist Tanisha Pyron. Activities run 11-3.
